Dr. Robert G. Duffett Named Our 9th President

The Board of Trustees of Eastern University is pleased to announce the appointment of Dr. Robert G. Duffett as the University's next president. President-elect Duffett will assume full responsibilities of the position on July 1, 2013, as President David Black retires after 15 years of dedicated service.

"Bob Duffett brings a deep sense of purpose combined with decades of impactful leadership in Christian higher education," said Dr. Ardell Thomas '63, chair of the presidential search committee.

Dr. Duffett said, "Connie and I sense a call to both Eastern University and this position. I look forward to leading a university that I have admired from my earliest days as a Christian. Eastern University's commitment to integrating Faith, Reason and Justice aligns with my passion for promoting education that blends spiritual formation, intellectual substance and social action. My life has focused on fostering faith and resourcing creativity that strengthens institutions of the church. In the face of demographic and economic challenges, I am committed to encouraging Eastern's culture of entrepreneurship so its talented people may continue to develop solutions assuring middle income families and first generation learners access to an excellent education.

We are eager to join the Eastern community and help extend its distinctive mission."

As president of Dakota Wesleyan University (DWU) for the last 12 years, Dr. Duffett has achieved national prominence for establishing the George McGovern Library, Museum and Center for Leadership and Public Service. Other key initiatives of his tenure include the Kelley Center for Entrepreneurship and the DWU Center for Talent Development. Dr. Duffett developed DWU's strategic plan and completed the largest comprehensive campaign in its history, exceeding $40 million.

Dr. Duffett took a leadership role in advocating for greater government support of students at South Dakota's private colleges. In opposition to the governor's position that state funding be limited to students at public universities, Dr. Duffett successfully argued for funding that attached to students rather than institutions. Additional efforts at the state legislature contributed to the passage of the LEAP legislation, which provides scholarships benefitting lower-income South Dakotans.

For most of the two decades prior to DWU, Dr. Duffett served in leadership roles at other Christian institutions. As provost and academic dean at Ottawa University, an American Baptist comprehensive university of 7,000 students with locations in four states and Asia, he led the faculty through an extensive curricular revision and academic governance reorganization while raising funds for scholarships and library technology. As director of doctoral studies at Northern Baptist Theological Seminary in Lombard, IL, Dr. Duffett developed Hispanic and Korean language doctoral programs, quadrupling enrollments during his tenure. As campus pastor and dean of Christian faith and life at Bethel University in St. Paul, MN, Dr. Duffett developed a youth ministry leadership degree program, directed international service learning programs, and secured grants to support student ministry initiatives.

A native of Youngstown, OH, Dr. Duffett attained his Bachelor of Arts in psychology and Greek from Bethel College, St. Paul, MN. His Master of Divinity degree was earned at Bethel Theological Seminary. His Master of Theological Studies degree in theology and communication comes from Princeton Theological Seminary, and his Ph.D. in organizational theory/management and historical theology was secured at the University of Iowa. Bob and his wife, Connie, have a son and a daughter, both in college.

'JUST ASK DR. BOEHLKE'

Is there something you'd like to know about the history of Eastern University or Palmer Seminary? Just ask Dr. Frederick J. Boehlke, Jr. '52 who has served Eastern since 1967 in many important teaching and leadership capacities, including official archivist. In fact, Dr. Boehlke has lived much of our history.

After earning his BA in history at the University of Pennsylvania, he entered Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary (now Palmer) in 1948 and graduated in 1952 with a Bachelor of Divinity. Through prayer and the advice of Christian friends, Fred Boehlke came to the conviction that his call from the Lord was to teaching rather than the pastoral ministry. He returned to the University of Pennsylvania to earn his Ph.D. in 1958 and then went to Judson College where he taught for 12 years.

In 1967, Dr. Boehlke came back to what was then Eastern Baptist College, as professor and chair of the history department. In his second year, he became chair of the curriculum committee, a position he held for more than 20 years. In this period, he led in several administrative tasks at the request of Dean Harold Howard. In 1972 he began serving as faculty secretary, taking the minutes of the faculty meetings, a service that has extended to 41 years.

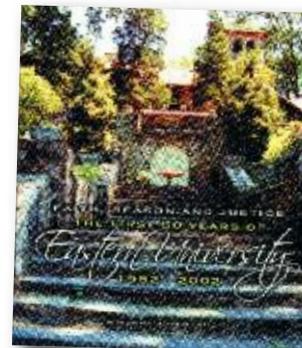

In 1975, Dr. Boehlke was appointed registrar, an office which he held for four years. He was also dean of academic programs. In 1979, Dr. Boehlke resumed full-time teaching. In 1981, Eastern College began teaching graduate courses, and Dr. Boehlke became chairman of the MBA committee. During a sabbatical in 1994-95, he conducted research on the history of local Southern Baptist work, which resulted in his book, From Generation to Generation: a History of Baptists in Pennsylvania/South Jersey.

In the spring of 2001, he began work on a history of Eastern, which was published by the communications office in 2003 as Faith, Reason, and Justice. The First 50 Years of Eastern University, 1952-2002. This book is available in the bookstore at St. Davids or from the communications office.

At the age of 71, Dr. Boehlke retired for the first time from the full-time faculty, but continued to teach two courses per semester. In 2010, at the age of 84, he retired from teaching after 55 years of service.

In addition to teaching several generations of students, Dr. Boehlke has made an enormous contribution as Eastern's archivist. When Warner Library was expanded in 2005 and the archives received a much larger room, Dr. Boehlke was able to better organize written records and begin to collect items of importance to the history of the school. Through his diligent efforts, the archives in Warner Library now include the most important items about the history of both the Seminary and the University. The story of Eastern's growth and mission could not be told without the perseverance and commitment of Dr. Fred Boehlke.

Dr. Boehlke's history of Eastern University is available from the Communications Office for $25. Order yours today by sending an e-mail to lolson@eastern.edu

Blessed with Pianos

By Dr. Ron Matthews, Chair, Fine and Performing Arts Division

God graciously surprised the music department this year. In anticipation of one of its largest entering music major classes, the music department received a conservatory grand piano from a family in Bryn Mawr last December. This past summer, Palmer Seminary gave the department two lovely, well maintained conservatory grands to accommodate the Seminary's move to King of Prussia. Its highly valued pipe organ was placed in storage pending the building of the proposed music recital hall.

This was followed by a private donation of an exquisite conservatory grand 2001 Crown Jewel Collection edition Steinway piano this fall. Lastly, we have the Edith Finton Rieber Steinway Concert Grand Piano signed by Mr. John Steinway himself. Ms. Rieber was artist in residence at Eastern about 30 years ago and offered to sell us this instrument to ensure it a good home. Through our annual Gala Music Benefit Concerts and a generous private donation, the music department purchased the piano and has moved it to the newly refurbished McInnis Auditorium. The retail value of these quality used pianos exceeds $100,000. Eastern presently has six Steinway grands, including two concert grands and an historic square grand piano yet to be restored.

The Edith Finton Rieber Piano

Steinway selects its finest concert grand pianos to be played solely by Steinway artists appearing in concert. These instruments have no serial numbers but instead are assigned concert department numbers. In the artist community certain instruments gain notoriety as particularly superb pianos by these numbers. One of the most famous of these instruments and certainly the most revered piano in Philadelphia history is CD-396 which was retired from concert use and purchased by Edith Finton Rieber.

This piano has been selected and performed upon by notable artists such as Andre Watts, Van Cliburn, Vladimir Ashkenazy, Victor Borge, Claudio Arrau, Emmanuel Ax, Sir Clifford Curzon, Peter Nero, Susan Starr, Chick Corea, Rudolph Serkin, Peter Serkin, Rosalyn Turek, Natalie Hinderas and Horacio Gutierrez.

The morning after his most recent Philadelphia appearance, world-renowned concert artist John Browning called Henry Steinway in New York and said, "396 is the ultimate Steinway. It should be taken back to the factory immediately and used as the model for what every Steinway should feel and sound like."

Women with a Mission

By Andrew Bush

Associate Professor of Missions and Anthropology

Seniors Megan Garrity (left) and Tali Constantz are from opposite coasts but they share a vision for their lives after graduation. Megan, from the picturesque village of Blue Hill, Maine, and Tali, from the bustling city of Dana Point, California, have an intense call to serve marginalized communities. Megan is committed to serving the deaf, and Tali has already formed her own nonprofit organization, Chosen Instruments, to help rehabilitate women who have been entangled in terrorist organizations in the Middle East and South Asia. Both are majoring in missions and anthropology.

Megan says, "I have a bilateral sensor neural hearing loss. All my life I have functioned alongside deaf individuals while also living in, as they say, the 'hearing world.' The important need that deaf individuals have to experience community was driven home to me while staying in Eburru, Kenya where I met Sarah. We spent several hours speaking with each other through sign language. Sarah had a significant hearing loss, and had to cope with the inability to communicate with her neighbors. As a result, Sarah was an outcast in her village. As we spent time silently talking with each other, it honestly felt like the world had stopped. God certainly had given us a place and time to meet. The next semester, as I reflected on this experience in a class presentation, I realized that I had a unique opportunity for ministry to the international deaf community. Following graduation, I intend to study at Gallaudet University in Washington D.C., the nation's first and leading deaf university. There I will pursue a graduate degree in international development. My hope is that with my education at Eastern and this training I will be fully prepared to help women like Sarah."

Tali says, "I was raised as a missionary kid, so I have been surrounded by missions my whole life. I have had an interest in those entangled in terrorism since 8th grade. Two years ago I was able to return to Sri Lanka to work with girls coming out of terrorism. I transferred to Eastern University because of its major in missions and anthropology. For my Missions 100 class I wrote about the women I knew in Sri Lanka, and of the desperation of women caught in violence in other countries.

As I wrote that paper, it was as if God was unfolding my future. This was my call: to rehabilitate women and children coming out of terrorism, and help them re-integrate into society. In addition to helping me discover my calling, Eastern has also prepared me to take the next step academically. I plan to pursue a graduate degree in counseling to be better equipped for my work with women."

The clarity of purpose Tali and Megan demonstrate illustrates the truth stated by Christ Jesus that if one is willing to lose one's life for His sake and the Gospel, one will find it.

Their passion for mission is an expression of the love of God for the world, and is a passion shared by many students in the missions and anthropology major at Eastern University.

CHESTER CLEAN-UP DAY

Eastern University first-year students and staff volunteers joined Chester, PA Mayor John Linder, council members, the city's highway department, and several local businesses for the annual Clean-Up Day in September.

Mayor Linder said, "It's great to have good partners come out to help raise our community up."

"Today, our freshman class is out here to perform service for others," said Andy Horvath, Eastern University director of Christian Formation. "This is really a good mutual partnership between the University and the city."

"The Gospel teaches us to be people of faith and justice and that is why we are here today," said Jensen Okimoto, who traveled from Japan to attend Eastern University. "I'm new to this general area and am here today to give glory to God," he said. "Part of that glory is giving back to the community."

Pini's Journey to Justice

By Rebecca Lauren Gidjunis '01

wamama wafrika
Jitokeze
Kenyan Women Building Sustainable Communities

Faith & Practice

In 2010, when Philipine (Pini) Chepkoech Kidulah (MA in International Development) began her organization, Jitokeze Wamama Wafrika, she thought of it not as a foundation, but as a movement.

As one of five girls, Pini quickly learned that the voice of women mattered. “The only man in the family was my dad. I had a very strong-willed mom who had fought different challenges that affected women.” These challenges included limited access to education, the pressure to marry young, and the cultural practice of female genital mutilation (FGM).

Pini’s mother, Lilian, is a person of vision and action who grew up in a poor family. When Lilian was twelve years old, she returned home to report to her parents that she would not go through the practice of FGM. Her brothers and father protested. But Pini’s mother stood up to them. Her father told Lilian to leave. And Lilian never returned, choosing instead to live with the nuns during her final years of schooling.

Pini holds tight to this legacy of speaking up against oppressive cultural practices and values her education. Other girls in Pini’s village of Makutano were not so lucky. Her dear friend, Salome, did not finish school because her family could not afford the fees, so Salome began work as a domestic servant. After a high school education that included hands-on studies in agriculture, Pini pursued environmental studies at Kenyan University.

She then sought out organizations such as World Vision to model sustainable development practices motivated by Christian theology.

One of the organizations that impacted her most was the African Evangelistic Enterprise, which promoted economic empowerment for women involved in the Hutu-Tutsi conflict in Rwanda. Here she was exposed to a method of motivating women to help themselves. These experiences brought her to Eastern University, where she pursued her master’s degree in International Development. “I wanted a program that was holistic and could help me see my dream come to pass.”

And so, Jitokeze Wamama Wafrika, which is Swahili for “Unveil yourselves, women of Africa,” was formed in 2010. In March 2012, Pini returned home to West Pokot to begin implementing her dream. Seventy-nine women, along with 15 girls from Pini’s former high school, engage in planting fruit trees and drought-resistant crops. Fifteen of these women have been displaced from their communities, many widowed, due to conflict over the scarce resource of clean water.

More than anything, Pini seeks to be holistic. “If you care about peace, climate change needs to concern you because it is breaking communities when they fight over resources like water. When young girls are growing crops and trees for their community, they are also learning how to be free from oppression.”

Making Ministry Connections to Serve the Disabled

By Fran Decker, Computer Services Librarian

In 2007, Lori McClure (an Eastern alum and ministry leader at Hope Community Church) proposed a short-term missions trip to Ghana on behalf of Handi*Vangelism, a ministry in Akron, PA that serves the disabled. When I heard the announcement, I knew I was meant to go. I have an adult son who is disabled and there was a need for some PC repair and network cabling; I had spent the previous 13 years working in tech support. Most significantly, God had put a desire in my heart to go to Africa. So that is how I wound up celebrating my 55th birthday at Echoing Hills Camp in Accra, Ghana.

Fast forward to June, 2011 when an e-mail was sent to the Eastern community seeking a host for two visiting faculty members from the Christian Service University College (CSUC) in Ghana. That fall, Margaret Aboagye, the University Chaplain, and Christine Adjer, the head of the Theology department arrived at my home for what would be a wonderful two weeks.

We promised that on our next trip to Ghana, we would visit them at the university. In April 2012, a few members from our ministry team at Echoing Hills took a 6-hour bus trip from Accra to Kumasi. The day after a tour of the magnificent campus, we were introduced to the CSUC President, Professor Emmanuel Frempong. We talked about ministry to the disabled and the president responded with a story. He said that three years ago, someone had asked him what the CSUC was doing for the special needs population of Ghana. At that time, the president replied that he would give it some consideration. Professor Frempong was certain God had sent us from Echoing Hills as a reminder that he had not yet acted on this promise. He assured us personally that he would follow through.

We came away from that meeting incredibly blessed by an awareness that God had been working. The students at CSUC will be blessed by opportunities to serve at the deaf and blind camps over the Christmas and Easter breaks. It's likely that most have never before had any interaction with the disabled. And the camps will be abundantly blessed to have students strong in their faith working alongside the full-time staff. I praise God for the opportunity He gave me to introduce these two ministries and I am looking to the great work He has planned for them both.

Jonathan Wilson-Hartgrove Writes Book On Christian Faith

Eastern University graduate Jonathan Wilson-Hartgrove '03 has published The Awakening of Hope: Why We Practice A Common Faith (Zondervan, August 2012). His newest book questions and explains the fundamental practices of Christianity.

“If how is the question of our age, the concern at the forefront of our minds,” Wilson-Hartgrove says, “then God’s interruption of our status quo also presents a new question – a question that’s equally practical and maybe even more radical. The question is, why?” Wilson-Hartgrove seeks to answer this question in the seven areas of Christianity that he addresses, using biblical reasoning and Scripture references.

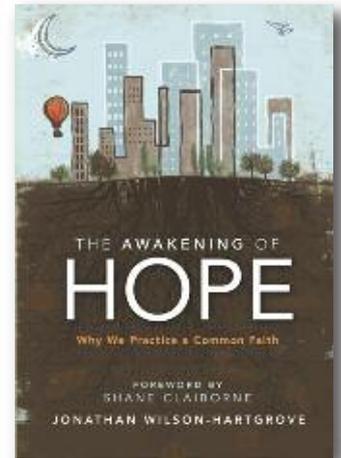

In addition to being an author, Wilson-Hartgrove is a speaker, associate minister at St. John's Baptist Church, and directs the School for Conversion, a nonprofit organization that works to foster community and form people in the way of Jesus. Wilson-Hartgrove has worked with Eastern University graduate Shane Claiborne '97 and is part of the New Monastic community.

Wilson-Hartgrove is the author of eight other books, including The Wisdom of Stability. He graduated from Duke Divinity School in 2006 and is a co-founder of Rutba House, a community in Durham, North Carolina centered on “hospitality, prayer, fasting, simplicity, peacemaking, celebration and song.”

If you are unsure as to whether The Awakening of Hope is for you, Wilson-Hartgrove writes on page eight, “This book is for people who have a hunch, whether you like the language of revival or not, that God is stirring a new movement in our world today...if God’s vision of peace and justice burns in your bones...if you’ve longed to see the love we were made for lived out in community – this book is for you.”

Palmer Student First Mission Apprentice

Jennifer (Jeni) Pedzinski has been named as American Baptist International Ministries (IM) first mission apprentice. Jeni, a candidate for future long-term service as an IM missionary, is enrolled in a dual Masters of Divinity/Masters in International Development program at Palmer Theological Seminary and Eastern University.

Jeni’s initial consideration of God’s call to international service came at age 11 through IM missionaries she met at her church, First Baptist Church of Niles, Michigan. Her sense of call was nurtured as she sought out educational opportunities and short-term mission experiences. A graduate of Bethany College of Missions, Jeni has served short-term in the Philippines, Guatemala, Cambodia, and Thailand.

Saturday, March 9 • 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. McInnis Auditorium, Eastern University, St. Davids

Social entrepreneurship is a movement that helps corporations focus not just on profit, but also on the needs of the people in the communities they serve. In the past decade, such ventures have started using sports as the doorway into these communities. Join us on March 9 to learn how the power of sports is used to redeem communities and launch micro-enterprises, education programs, and other development initiatives in impoverished communities in American cities and around the world.

Esperanza Expansion

Esperanza College of Eastern University opened a new wing this fall dedicated to science, math, accounting and student development. This expansion was made possible through the award of a highly competitive Title V grant from the federal Department of Education. Esperanza's goal is to begin shifting the culture of North Philadelphia towards greater achievement in the math and science fields. The new facilities are equipped with six classrooms, math and science laboratories, and a student center. The dedication ceremony featured presentations by Rev. Luis Cortés Jr., president of Esperanza; Dr. Elizabeth Conde-Frazier, dean of Esperanza College of Eastern University; and a display of the work of artist Alberto Becerra.

ENDURING QUESTIONS GRANT FOR DR. MCGUIRE

Dr. Steven McGuire, assistant professor of political science, received the National Endowment for the Humanities Enduring Questions grant, which he is using to develop a course based on the question, What is a Person? This course is designed "to investigate the definition of person by examining historically contested cases of personhood falling under five categories: non-human animals; artificial intelligence; prenatal and cognitively impaired human beings; women; and slaves."

DR. BOYD PROMOTES SOCIAL JUSTICE

Dr. Darrell (Drick) Boyd, associate professor of urban and interdisciplinary studies, participated in a conference on social justice at Holy Family University.

He presented a paper, "Anti-Racist White Allies: A Need for Role Models." He told the story of John Woolman, a Quaker in the 1700's who convinced Quaker slaveowners to release their slaves, and J. Waties Waring, a judge in Charleston, SC, who late in his life issued several decisions assuring equal treatment for blacks in the segregated South.

Bryan Stevenson Wins Smithsonian American Ingenuity Award

The Smithsonian Magazine has named Eastern University alum and attorney Bryan Stevenson '81 as the recipient of its American Ingenuity Award for Social Progress. This award is given to those who have achieved a breakthrough that was influential within the past year.

Bryan was honored for his work with the Equal Justice Initiative and the Supreme Court case he and his team won in 2012 upholding the rights of incarcerated children. Read more at: www.smithsonianmag.com

December 2012 Commencement Speaker Dr. Barbara Williams-Skinner

A nationally recognized spiritual leader, teacher, lecturer and writer, Dr. Barbara Williams-Skinner is also president of Skinner Leadership Institute. She and her late husband, the Reverend Tom Skinner, established the Skinner Leadership Institute in 1992 to produce a new generation of leaders who are technically excellent and spiritually mature.

Hayes Receives Peace and Justice Scholarship

Graduate student Tamara Hayes has received a 2012 Vincent L. Hawkinson Foundation Scholarship for Peace and Justice in Minneapolis, MN. This scholarship was given in recognition of her efforts to promote a more peaceful and just world. A native of St. Paul, MN, Hayes is pursuing a master's degree in international development at Eastern University. Prior to enrolling at Eastern, Hayes spent six years in Ethiopia with the Mennonite Central Committee, working closely with a community of people living with HIV. Hayes was involved with creating a fair-trade jewelry business, a school for children, a health clinic, and housing. "Tamara has a strong work ethic and a deep commitment to the poor. She brings a passion for meeting immediate needs as well as addressing root causes of poverty and injustice," said Daniel Leonard, Mennonite Central Committee Country Representative. Visit www.hawkinsonfoundation.org.

CREATING SUCCESSFUL WRITERS

Dr. William Yerger, associate professor in the Loeb School of Education, contributed an article to Creative Education. His article, "Using the AREA Approach to Create Successful Writers," is based on schools successfully addressing the high stakes assessments that states are now administering. The AREA approach is an excellent strategy that both students and teachers can employ in answering questions either in writing or in public speaking.

DR. MCCRAE'S ORGANIZATIONAL STUDIES RESEARCH

Dr. Melisande McCrae, associate professor of organizational development, presented her research at the 50th Anniversary of the International Society for Performance Improvement in Toronto, Canada. Dr. McCrae's session examined the role of routine and non-routine thinking in the Human Performance Technology consulting process.

DR. CHUNG PRESENTS PAPER AT NJ AUTISM CONFERENCE

Dr. Walter Chung, professor of counseling psychology and coordinator of the applied behavior analysis concentration, presented a poster entitled "Effectiveness of a Comprehensive Behavioral Intervention Program in Reducing Maladaptive Behaviors and Optimizing the Psychotropic Medication of an Adult Female with Autism" at the 2012 New Jersey Autism Conference.

Reaching Peaks for African Leaders

Dr. Beth Birmingham, Economic Development '00, associate professor of Leadership; alumnus Stephanie Nitschke, International Development '12 and student Tim Paulson, International Development '13; climbed Mount Kilimanjaro (19,300 feet) in Tanzania in July as a fundraiser for African Leadership scholarships to the programs of the School of Leadership and Development.

For over 20 years, Eastern's programs have been developing leaders in Africa, Asia and Latin America to serve the poor. Many promising leaders from those regions, however, struggle with the cost of tuition and books. This struggle is what inspired all three climbers in this journey.

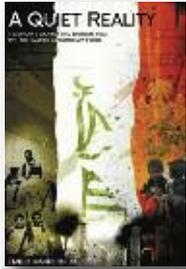

"No matter how overwhelming and hopeless the struggle against poverty becomes, when you are leading under the authority of God, there is an entire kingdom of resources and support that is also fighting alongside you. Our education served to rigorously equip us intellectually and spiritually to engage in the global fight against poverty," said Stephanie Nitschke.

Psychology Honor Society Earns Model Chapter Award

The undergraduate chapter of Psi Chi (the International Psychology Honors Society) was awarded the Model Chapter Award by the International Headquarters. Eastern's Psi Chi chapter inducts several students each year who must meet rigorous academic criteria and demonstrate a commitment to excellence in the discipline of psychology. Dr. Tara Stoppa serves as the advisor.

Navy Chaplain Writes about the Iraq War

Emilio Marrero Jr. '82 is a Captain in the Chaplain Corps of the United States Navy. Chaplain Marrero is a 1982 graduate of Eastern University and earned his M. Div. degree from what is now Palmer Seminary in 1985. He went on to complete his D.Min. in religious education from Claremont School of Theology in California.

Chaplain Marrero is the author of A Quiet Reality: A Chaplain's Journey into Babylon, Iraq with the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force (Faithwalk Publishing, Ohio). Readers get a glimpse of the untold war from the perspective of a chaplain who accompanied Marines into battle in Desert Storm and twice in Iraqi Freedom. Chaplain Marrero is not a cheerleader for the war, but a pastor who struggles with being a reflection of God in a time of war, defines his role as a chaplain, and seeks to find opportunities for compassion. A Quiet Reality allows you to walk by his side as he reflects, ministers, and leads the efforts to protect the ancient site of Nebuchadnezzar's Palace in ancient Babylon. Join him on an exhilarating tactical convoy during his first night in Iraq, and share with him the painful ministry to the wounded and dead. Chaplain Marrero's memoir is a heartwarming, hopeful commentary on the challenges of being true to one's faith and one's calling in the most trying of times.

Chaplain Marrero has served in a series of diverse tours and is currently serving as the Chaplain at the Navy Expeditionary Combat Command in Little Creek, VA. His personal awards include Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, Meritorious Service Medal (three awards), Navy Commendation Medal (four awards), Navy Achievement Medal, Combat Action Ribbon and over twenty campaign and unit awards.

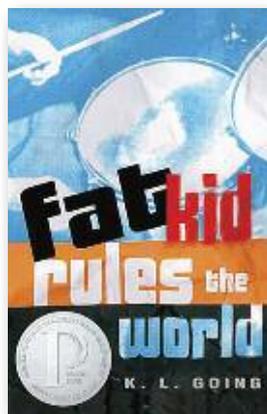

A Quiet Reality has received praise from military and civilian readers. Reverend Luis Cortes, Jr., President, Esperanza USA, says, "This book is highly recommended if you are interested in another perspective on the Iraqi war, if you are a person of faith, or a person who is thinking of a calling to ministry." Details about the book are at: www.a-quiet-reality.com

Author K. L. Going

Kelly L Going '95 has written six books for young adults, but her novel Fat Kid Rules the World (which won a Printz Honor in 2003) has just been made into an independent film.

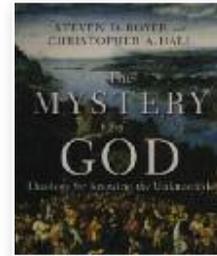

The story revolves around a marginally suicidal boy whose life is changed by a chance meeting with a part-time guitar player named Curt who asks "Fat Kid" to join his band. Kelly attended Eastern as a sociology major and a Biblical studies minor.

NEW BOOK FOR DR. HALL

Dr. Christopher Hall, University chancellor and dean of Palmer Theological Seminary, has written a book, The Mystery of God: Theology for Knowing the Unknowable, with Dr. Steven D. Boyer, professor of theology (Baker Academic). His book review of "Misreading Scripture with Western Eyes: Removing Cultural Blinders to Better Understand the Bible," appeared in the November, 2012 issue of Christianity Today. Dr. Hall presented a paper, "The Influence of the African Fathers on the Early Church," to the Theologians Network of the European Leadership Forum, Eger, Hungary, in May. He presented "Evangelical-Mormon Dialogue" at Brigham Young University in June, and delivered the Commencement Address at the Robert E. Webber Institute for Worship Studies, Jacksonville, FL. Dr. Hall presented "The Desert Fathers and Mothers" at the Renovare Retreat, with Richard Foster, in San Diego, CA, in July.

DR. ALEXANDER HONORED BY ASSEMBLIES OF GOD SEMINARY

Dr. Paul Alexander, professor of Christian ethics and public policy at Palmer Theological Seminary, was inducted into the Assemblies of God Theological Seminary 2012 Sigma Chi Pi

Honor Society in May. His first book, Peace to War: Shifting Allegiances in the Assemblies of God, was awarded the international Pneuma Book of the Year and reflects his efforts to encourage Pentecostals and other Christians to rediscover their early commitments to nonviolence and peace.

1950s

Rev. Jack Lottey '54 celebrated the 50th anniversary of his ordination in April 2007 at the Tabernacle Baptist Church in Schenectady, NY. As a student at Eastern, Jack remembers assisting Dr. George Claghorn '44 in the preparation of his Ph.D. thesis Aristotle's Criticism of Plato's "Timaeus" for publication. The original price of the book in 1954 was $2.85, postpaid. The book now sells secondhand on Amazon for $125.
